Kentucky Windage

(By P. W.)

An after-hours "depository" has been installed in the City Hall to serve as a safe-guard for funds collected by the police department during hours that the City Clerk's office is not open.

The depository, installed in March, replaces a former "lock-box" system described by Mayor Tripp and the city Commissioners as "inadequate" in accounting for monies collected for appearance bonds and other sources after regular office hours.

The new depository, located in the wall of the corridor outside the City administrative offices, can be opened only during regular office hours.

"The foolproof system of 'checks and balances' enables us to keep up the high standard of performance expected of our hard-working police force, many of whom have put in many long years of outstanding service to the city," Mayor Nelson Tripp told the News in commenting on the new depository system for the collection of police fines.

Many "thanks" to the many readers who have found our current series of feature stories about people and places in and around Fulton to be right interesting reading. I am enjoying doing them, and I have right now about 20 subjects that I want to do stories on as time permits.

There really isn't enough "hot news" around a community this size to justify blaring headlines every week — as you well know, but there are literally hundreds of interesting people and places to write about, each telling a special little story of their own, in which a bit of the community history can be entwined with little or no effort at all.

Speaking of "hot news" in a small community, an awful lot of it oozes out of the sidewalks, and the counter-tops, and the blank walls. In Washington they would call it a "news leak", but in a small community it quietly travels so fast that one can simply call it a "desire to communicate," or something like that. Here is a good bit of advice that Jo and I were once given by the late "Billy" Snider, who was Lt.-Governor of Mississippi at the time we worked for him on the old Clarksdale Register.

We were after Billy to tell us, confidentially, something about a highly-interesting and secret matter, but he wouldn't even tell us, his close friends and fellow-newspaper workers.

"I can't do it," he said. "Nobody knows this but me, and only me." And he held up one finger.

"Now if I tell you,—even though you swear you will tell no one else,—how many people do you think will know it? Two? Just you and I?"

He held up two fingers.

"Do you think that is two? No, that is eleven. And if I should divulge this secret to just two of my closest and most trusted friends, do you know how many people will find out about it?"

And he held up three fingers.

"Do you think that is three,—just me and two others? No, that is one-hundred and eleven!"

I have often mused about the soundness and the accuracy of this reasoning, and it is pretty well correct. One person tells another "in strict confidence"; the other tells another "in strict confidence," and pretty soon you have the eleven, all "in strict confidence." Pretty soon the whole place knows it, "in strict confidence!"

Our son Paul is graduating at Murray this weekend and we are delighted that he is staying in the news-gathering field, even though in radio instead of the old basic standby, newspapering. He has been employed at station WKLO in Louisville, where he will be in the company of professionals other than his parents in getting started on a career and in learning that there are lots of ways to handle this job other than the way we do it. As far as I'm concerned (mothers don't always agree), that's good. One of these days he may be back here writing this very column, but in the meantime and in the intervening years he will learn first-hand a lot about people, and places, and events. One can't get that just by beating a well-worn path between 209 Commercial Avenue and the fifth house west of the Derby in Highlands.

I guess, that out in the grape arbor be—

County Food Stamp Program Is At $26,000 Monthly Purchase Level

Food stamps have more meaning than ever before for low-income families.

That's the opinion of Mrs. Margaret Adams, Field Office Administrator in Fulton County, who reports that participation in the program continues to show a significant increase following inauguration of important rule changes in February.

June 1, 1970 — Food stamps have more meaning than ever before for low-income families.

That's the opinion of Mrs. Margaret Adams, Field Office Administrator in Fulton County, who reports that participation in the program continues to show a significant increase following inauguration of important rule changes in February.

Mrs. Adams noted that during May, participation in the program in Fulton County increased by more than 158 persons as compared with the previous month.

"This increase is due almost entirely to the fact that the new food stamp rules make the program of significantly greater value to low-income families who need help in improving their diets," Mrs. Adams said.

Generally, the rule changes involved reducing the purchase requirement and increasing the amount of free food coupons many eligible families receive.

Mrs. Adams urged local volunteer groups, civic groups and other organizations to offer their services to help families getting food stamp aid.

"Many food stamp families have no regular transportation, either to the food stamp issuance office or to the grocery store," Mrs. Adams noted.

"By volunteering to provide this transportation, as well as helping instruct families in wise buying practices and other activities, local organizations in Fulton County will be making a valuable contribution to the community," she said.

During May, officials of USDA's Food and Nutrition Service reports, a total of 1073 persons in Fulton County paid $8,335.50 of their own money for $26,058.00 worth of food coupons.

This means, FNS officials note, that the economy of the county received a $17,722.50 boost in just one month, through the bonus or free food coupons given eligible families. The bonus coupons represent increased buying power at local authorized grocery stores.

The free coupons each family receives are paid for entirely by USDA.

To apply for food stamp aid in Fulton County, interested low-income families should go to the Public Assistance Office, at 307 Main Street, Fulton, Kentucky. The head of the household should apply for each family.

Mrs. Walter Hill, Beloved Lady, Dies Quietly At 89

By Jo Westpheling

Almost a quarter of a century ago, just moving here from Washington, D. C., I had the occasion to come in contact with a lovely lady, a member of a prominent and distinguished Kentucky family.

Together we worked on a matter of mutual interest with some of the friends I had just left behind in Washington. The matter was resolved with success, which brought a great deal of happiness to Mrs. Walter Hill and to her family.

My help to Mrs. Hill was such a little thing to do, yet to us it brought a friendship of long and lasting duration. It was a friendship that deepened during the years, with never an eventful occasion in our family, in our new lives, that didn't bring a little note of congratulations, a message of condolence, and a happy message of cheer for all the holidays we shared together.

Mrs. Hill, known to her intimates as Birdie, was as dynamic and forceful an individual in her waning years as she was in the long ago, when she became one of the only two women ever to serve on the Fulton Board of Education, an unheard of position in the days when women's suffrage might become a fact in the distant future.

I thought so many times of doing a "silhouette" story on

Hi Cousin:

Enclosed you will find a complimentary copy of my new record "Mortgaged Plymouth," that is my answer to the Welfare Cadillac. I am also enclosing copies of letters from the President's secretary, Paul Harvey (he closed out his nation wide newscast with this news item), plus a copy of our Dixie Recorder that also tells about my recent trip to Europe. By the way, while I was in London, John Burton and Rita (Rita Wilson) Tigrett had me as guest one evening and it was great. Had a wonderful time - they are truly the perfect host and hostess. Lovely home, delightful food, and we talked about everybody back home - Rita especially asked about you and we really talked "good stuff" about our Cousin Jo Westpheling. See there, everybody loves you, cuz!

Back to my record - well, they say it is being aired in 43 states, only time will tell about it, you know, but any way I feel like it is the voice of the Silent Majority, the real

AMERICANS who pack a lunch to eat in the middle of an honest day's work rather than a sign to keep from working. I think it's time the GREAT SILENT MAJORITY SPOKE OUT AND I DON'T THINK WE CAN WAVE OUR FLAG TOO MUCH. I also think the more we can pour letters into Washington supporting our representatives and Senators, whether they be constructive or just saying "Thanks" along with voicing our opinions and feelings, the better we will be. We need to rally around the FLAG and restore the DIGNITY, RESPECT, AND LOVE that is ALL RED WHITE AND BLUE.

I also believe that a lot of the campus problems could be solved if more parents would withdraw financial aid immediately when a child decides to leave his or her classroom and take part in a protest.

Well, I didn't mean to take a text but, cuz, you know how folks like you and I are - just get all wound up in what we believe and Thank God, there are folks like you - telling it like it is and keeping the work going to RALLY AROUND OLD GLORY.

My best to Paul and everybody. Am enjoying the paper very much,

A wonderful two weeks—one week in London and one week in Ireland. The week in London was spent attending the first International Congress of American Women in Radio and Television. Seventeen foreign countries were represented and the Ambassadors of these countries were present at the Grosvenor House Banquet in London on Saturday night, April 25th, when the keynote speaker was Dr. Frank Stanton of CBS. The Thursday before, April 23rd, was spent seeing the great historical landmarks in London before the business meetings started at the Royal Garden Hotel. On late Friday, we were thrilled to receive a beautiful engraved invitation from Her Royal Highness, Princess Margaret, Countess of Snowden, to a reception that evening at Lancaster House. The glamour of royalty, the beauty of Lancaster House and the formal introduction of each guest combined to provide me with an unforgettable evening.

COFFEE CUP CHATTER

STARTING OUT TO MANAGE YOUR MONEY IN 1970—If you are interested in better money management, the first thing to do is to outline a plan. At first it should be written out and fairly detailed at that; later on, you can modify.

To understand what such planning involves, think for a moment how you and every family you know spend money. Consciously or not, it is according to some system or plan. You want to come out even at the end of the month, so perhaps you don't buy a new dress or an expensive lunch today. Or you want to have enough money on Saturday morning to do the week-end shopping, so tonight you stay home from the movies.

By having a plan you will gain two things. You will be better able to control how you spend your money, and you will know, perhaps for the first time, where your money is going and why.

ARE YOU A GOOD LISTENER? Listening is part of communication. Hearing may be the most neglected of our senses, listening is almost a lost art. Do you really listen to your children? Much of the child's learning comes about because someone is listening. Adults sometimes think that if they are talking and a child is listening, learning is taking place but this is not always true. A child's learning depends largely upon how he understands and feels about a situation. Parents can be helpful only when they are aware of these feelings, and this can come only from listening carefully to a child. Maybe lines of communication could be re-established, if adults listened more to what the younger generation is trying to tell us.

Why is breakfast important? Researchers have found that when breakfast was omitted students took longer to make decisions, were less steady, and work output was less. We can conclude that when students eat a good breakfast, they are likely to: (1) work and play better, (2) be more alert in their thinking and action in the late morning hours (3) be calmer and steadier, and (4) have more fun and enjoyment.

When you read the hang tags on garments you may notice that some have "waterproof fabric" and some "water-repellent fabric". The waterproof fabric is a material, often of plastic, which liquids cannot penetrate. The water-repellent fabric is one impregnated with a silicone solution which makes it shed water.

Do you put away important papers "for safe keeping" and then forget where you put them? Do you often waste time looking for the phone bill that came last week—or information on last year's income tax—or papers on the family car? If so, you're a "can't finder."

A family business center is a good cure for "can't finders". Homemaking has become an important business, and the efficient home manager will keep good records and have a handy, well-organized place to keep them.

Don't use "lack of time" as an excuse to neglect organizing family business materials; a business center will save you many hours of hunting for things all over the house. You need not try to organize everything in one day, for the center will build up gradually, but the business of homemaking will be much more pleasant if you start now to cure the "can't finder" habit. —Barletta Wrather, Murray, Ky. 42071 — Phone — 753-1452

FOOD SHOPPERS will shop with a list which was planned at home. If you have a list of your shopping needs, you won't be tempted to do much impulse buying. A good shopper will compare price and quality, read labels. Labels help in comparing price in terms of quality also give other information helpful to the shopper. —Irma Hamilton, Courthouse, Mayfield, Ky. 42066 — Phone 247-2334

Remember, high fashion doesn't mean you must be a fantastically wealthy woman living in a chateau in France. High fashion means wearing the clothes that are becoming to you and appropriate for the occasion and keeping them—and you immaculately fresh at all times. Ann Landers

— Your Problems Bring Answers —

Dear Ann Landers: When I was 13 (11 years ago) my uncle started a homosexual relationship with me. It lasted until I was nearly 15. One day we were discovered by my father. The next night my uncle killed himself. This caused such an upheaval in our family that I was placed in a foster home.

My foster parents were the finest people God ever put on this earth. Out of their own modest funds they paid for my psychotherapy and put me through college.

I recently became engaged to a wonderful girl. We plan to marry in August. My real parents demand that I tell the girl and her family the whole sordid story of my past. I do not feel it is necessary for them to know. I'm not the same person I was eleven years ago and I see no purpose that could be served by digging up old bones. My fiancée is very naive and her parents are ultra-conservative. They would be shocked to death. My foster parents have begged my folks to stay out of it but they are adamant. What should be done?—Eric.

Dear Eric: Your foster parents may be "the finest people God ever put on this earth" but they are not very realistic. Your fiancée and her folks should be told and you are the one who should tell them—with your foster parents at your side.

If there had been only the homosexual incident, I would say "keep quiet." But the suicide makes the story spectacular—one which is sure to be remembered by people who know you and your family. Someone would surely pass the word to your girl and her parents. Then where would you be?

If they cannot accept you after they learn of your background it is best that you know it now.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband is one of the greatest guys in the world—but he is becoming an insufferable bore. Reason: We are building a new home and that's all Freddie he is imposing on people and to cut it out. Warn die talks about. He has memorized the dimensions of all the rooms, knows the technical names for mortar mix, wood treatment and termite protection. He draws diagrams and gives lectures of the windows, the air conditioning and the lighting. In brief, he monopolizes every conversation and our friends are sick of it. Last night he hauled the blueprints out of his pocket and spread them on the dinner table. We had six guests and I thought I'd die.

I hate to deflate his ego because this house means a great deal to him. But he's becoming a pain in the ankle. What should I do?—Fed Up

Dear Fed: I can think of few things in this world less interesting than other people's blueprints—unless perhaps it is slides of their trip or movies of their child's birthday party. There are times when a wife must be brutally frank to save a husband from himself. Tell Freddie he is imposing on people and to cut it out. Warn him that if he starts talking about the house again you'll promptly change the subject as an act of mercy. Then do it.

Even Moderate Drugs Tend To Cause The User To Go To Extremes, UK Researcher Finds

Do the use of everyday drugs affect our political thinking?

A University of Kentucky professor believes they do, and he has been conducting experiments to prove his contention. Dr. Dean Jaros, assistant professor of political science, has just completed two experiments on a group of volunteers, using the drug phenobarbital, a mild depressant.

Dr. Jaros' theories revolve around four hypotheses, and to each hypothesis he attached a phase of the experiment. First, Dr. Jaros believes the administration of a depressant like phenobarbital or alcohol increases the probability of the individual's choosing extreme political alternatives if they are available to him.

Secondly, he says, "a depressant should increase the extent of willingness to participate. The subject would be more willing to give his time, services and even make donations to the party organization."

Thirdly, arising from the first hypothesis, Dr. Jaros theorized that people who had taken a depressant would be more amenable to political persuasion, and finally, that people under a depressant would bring a larger number of criteria to bear on a problem, thus making its solution all the more difficult — "they will find more alternatives."

In conclusion to his theory, Dr. Jaros feels that depressants are likely to temporarily desocialize the individual, so that he does not reach his decisions in a way in which he has been brought up, nor are such decisions necessarily representative of his sentiments.

If "allegiances are singularly and uncompromisingly held," as Dr. Jaros believes they are while under a depressant, then obviously such a case is not "conducive to stability in a democracy."

Dr. Jaros' experiment hinges on his four hypotheses. To prove them, he had to get a reasonable view of his subjects' political views before they under-went the experiment. This was achieved with questionnaires, which attempted to discern political views, party affiliations, criteria for choosing a candidate, and willingness to participate.

After a verbal examination by a physician and his approval of the subject to undergo the experiment, the subject was shown into a room and given a pill, which contained either the depressant or was completely harmless. The subject then was put to solving some mathematical problems to allow the drug to take effect. The next stage was to re-test the subject, using the same questionnaire he was given initially.

He then was asked to participate in a political discussion with one of Dr. Jaros' assistants unknown to the subject. It was the assistant's job to take an opposite view to that of the subject. The conversation was tape-recorded, and with the aid of the questionnaire the subject's persuadability variance could be measured.

The final stage came when the subject was confronted by another assistant, posing as a party member (of the party for which the subject had shown a preference in the questionnaire), who asked for assistance either in terms of money or time.

The preliminary results of Dr. Jaros' experiment have been encouraging. He says some hypotheses seem to be borne out by the initial experiment. Although his ideas have attracted much professional response, including an invitation to speak on the subject at an international conference, Dr. Jaros feels there is a definite need to experiment further, especially, he says, on a more representative section of the population.

Columnist David Lawrence, in a recent article dealing with the possibility of drugs playing a part in campus disorders, expressed a pretty firm opinion that drugs have contributed to the "mysteriously-caused" campus uprisings around the nation, and agrees in principle with what Dr. Jaros finds. Said Lawrence in his article:

"Inquiries among those who have been conducting investigations on the campuses of different institutions indicate that, while militants have organized major 'demonstrations,' participants in the disorders—particularly some who damaged property—have included individuals who were under the influence of drugs. In various instances, where students' rooms have been searched, marijuana has been discovered. Extremists, both blacks and whites, have been found to have taken drugs of one kind or another."

"Investigators for state and local law-enforcement agencies feel that the use of drugs has by no means been the principal influence in the disorders, but has had its effect in intensifying mob psychology and spreading the riots. Unquestionably, drugs have the same effect as alcohol upon certain individuals in lessening inhibitions so that they are willing to do things which they normally would not do, such as breaking windows or setting fire to buildings."

How Accurate Is The Fulton County Census?

Our family Census form arrived back in February, with instructions to fill it out, but do not mail; an enumerator would be around to pick it up.

It wasn't picked up by March 1st. Nor April 1st. Nor May 1st. Nor June 1st.

Last week we reported that Fulton County, by "preliminary" count, shows a 10 percent drop since 1960. In desperation, we dropped our family census form in the nearest mailbox.

Official census figures are very important to a city and county, since population count and other statistics gathered thereby are presumed to be accurate yardsticks for determining comparative standings in many fields of governmental and private activity.

Surely ours was an isolated instance of somebody "slipping up" on his or her enumerating. But the question looms: We wonder how many other "isolated instances" there might be in Fulton County. If there are several hundred, we may not have shown any loss at all.

POET'S CORNER

THE OLD COVERED BRIDGE

The old covered bridge over Sycamore Creek
Still stands, as it did long ago,
A shelter in storm to a traveler and horse
From rain and sleet and snow.

What memories it brings of a time long past
When things moved more safely and slow.
The motorist now zips through the old covered bridge,
Intent on how fast he can go.

They are passing away, the old covered bridges,
To those of concrete and steel,
But dreams that were made in the old covered
bridge,
To the old folks will ever be real.

SINCE SILENT SPRING, by Frank Graham. Rachel Carson's SILENT SPRING appeared in 1962 and was immediately recognized as one of those rare books which change the course of history. Its publication was greeted with a roar of protest—and approval. Alarmed manufacturers of pesticides first tried to prevent the book's publication, then turned batteries of publicity agents to smearing book and author. Yet after seven years at the heart of controversy, SILENT SPRING stands vindicated, a prescient warning of things to come. IN SILENT SPRING, Frank Graham reports the mounting evidence, world wide, that confirms the dangers Rachel Carson saw.

THE HOLLYWOOD STYLE, by Arthur Knight. Since its Golden Age in the first flush of the opulent Twenties, Hollywood has housed our American equivalent of European royalty—the motion-picture elite. Here are the picture-book castles in which they have lived—from the first flamboyant days through to the more sophisticated Sixties. The houses reflect the personalities and idiosyncrasies of the men and women who built them.

THE SATURDAY EVENING POST TREASURY. The Saturday Evening Post is now gone, but it will never be forgotten, and within these pages are the best stories, articles and pictures that ever appeared in the magazine America loved most. The editors of Post ransacked thousands of issues to provide a veritable windfall of good reading from founder Benjamin Franklin's own wisdom and Booth Tarkington's warm humor to Nobel prize-winning William Faulkner, from Edgar Allan Poe to Jack London, G. K. Chesterton, and J. P. Marquand.

DISCOVERING THE OUTDOORS, by Laurence P. Pringle. Where do you begin to look for the nest of a bluejay? How do you go about catching and studying the small mammals

IN THE DEATH OF A MAN, by Lesley Egan. Jesse Falkenstein, a lawyer, was putting away his notes on the Brundage divorce when his secretary came in. "I'm sorry, Mr. Falkenstein, it's a Mrs. Lester. She says she's a friend of your sister's and will you see her even if she hasn't an appointment." Jesse didn't want to see Mrs. Lester, but he did. She was a strawberry blonde, with a lot of rather untidy hair, and a vaguely opulent look about her . . .

THE MINSTREL BOY, by Vian Smith. In 1919, a wild three-year-old horse was grazing on the moors at Year Stone—waiting for a master who would not return from the Great War. In 1923, that horse was entered in the Grand National. This exciting novel describes the hope and heartbreak that marked those years between for the people whose lives were touched by a gallant brown gelding named The Minstrel Boy.

SONGS AS REPOSITORIES

Human institutions come and go, some of them leaving few lasting evidences of their having been. But most institutions ultimately have their own literature, in the form of stories and songs. A rather effective history of America could be written from the songs alone that have grown up around institutions that have now gone or have so changed that, like the old gray mare, "they ain't what they used to be." Until within my own time no very great effort was made by folklorists to collect these songs, because folklore scholars felt that most such things were worthless, unless they were in some remote corner of the world that they and they alone had studied.

"Yankee Doodle" would be a good place to begin. I used to wonder why, when Yankee Doodle stuck a feather in his cap, he was called a "macaroni." The only use of that word that we know was the name of a kind of food. But two hundred years ago, even before Yankee Doodle became a dandy, a dude or dandy was called a macaroni; it was a great trick of satirists to picture different kinds of macaronis: soldiers, lords, politicians, etc.

For many generations the height of poetry was the old well, with its old oaken bucket. With modern knowledge of sanitation and with different ways of procuring water, the old oaken bucket is just about dead except for the song that older people still know. But for the time, I am afraid that most younger people would shrug their shoulders at the suggestion of drinking from such a container.

When the Erie Canal was finished, almost a hundred and fifty years ago, canal songs came into great favor. Unfortunately, the canal fever did not reach into our immediate world: hence the songs that grew up then seem a little out of place and queer. But the railroad, which came next in time, caught my generation with one of the great folk songs, "Casey Jones." And think of the long popularity of "The Wabash Cannonball." The steamboat, older than either the canal or the railroad, has a veritable anthology of stories and songs, ranging from "Huckleberry Finn" to Mike Fink. Even "Steamboat Bill" keeps reappearing

Gentlemen,

Almost everywhere we turn someone has something to say about the "Generation Gap." About how we can't seem to talk to our youth, and on and on.

Then we hear the youth talking about how they are a bit confused as to just how much they should believe of what we as adults are saying. Really it is no wonder that they should be somewhat confused.

We had a group of kids that, with a great sense of helpfulness, made a survey of the businesses of our town in order to see just how the people felt about the situation. They were doing this, they thought, in order to help the town. They do want to help. They proudly present the results of their efforts to us.

Now what have we done with these results??? We are making a battle out of them. We have made something small out of a real big job. If you don't think it is a big job just try calling every listing in the phone book.

So maybe their figures weren't 100 percent correct—so what??? Does this give us the right to make them worse?? After reading the versions of both papers I can even find loop holes in both—so who is wrong???

Why don't we commend the youth for their efforts and for their reasons for doing it in the first place. This just might help narrow the so called Generation Gap.

Yours For Youth,
O. C. Walker

on song lists; it would be easy in almost any gathering to start the song and soon have others helping sing it, even by people who know nothing about the classic race between the NATCHEZ and the ROBERT E. LEE.

In my childhood we rarely grew up on cowboy songs, real ones and not home-made ones such as have almost oversteered the later books on cowboy music. Of course, most cowboy songs were new words to older tunes, as "Oh, Bury Me Not on the Lone Prairie" is a reworked sailor song, "Oh, Bury Me Not in the Deep, Deep Sea," which I knew, along with its more famous successor. For some strange reason, however, our area did not know "Home on the Range," and a very large portion of America was just as ignorant as we. I suppose that this short, hymn-like song would be chosen as the best of the cowboy songs. I am afraid the modern cowboy is hardly as much a subject for poetry as was the older one; when I saw cowboys in jeans out to round up a herd, I had a sort of temporary heart failure. Maybe some future song-writer will find the poetry in that and make other listeners thrill with the romantic life of twentieth-century cowhands.

Introducing Our Churches - God's Agency For Spreading His Love

WESLEY METHODIST CHURCH

The early history of Wesley Methodist is rather vague. Our oldest citizens tell us the ground on which the first church was erected was given by Mr. Mark Hardin, who also built the first church.

The date and erection of the first church, a wooden structure, is not known, but is thought to have been in or about the year 1850. It was given the name of Wesley in honor of John Wesley, "The Father of Methodism."

In 1853 the church was destroyed by fire. Brother Weaver was the pastor at that time. He and some of the faithful members immediately began to build the second church. Some of the members who made it possible are: Jessie Walker, Mark Hardin, Milk Gardner, Mrs. Mary Bushart, Hall Cooley, Solomon Hancock, Jack Hardin, Mr. Clabe, Dr. W. S. Hamlett, and John Phelps.

The second church was built by Mark Hardin, the father of M. D. Hardin and Mrs. John Robey. The fall of 1883 was the beginning of the revivals, which continue to this day. Out of these great revivals have come some very prominent people.

In 1930 the church building was in a sad state of repair and the board of trustees, with the congregation, thought it best to tear down and rebuild.

On June 3, 1930, the cornerstone was laid in a very colorful and impressive ceremony. Former ministers who were present at this service were: N. W. Lee, M. H. Alexander, J. F. Morelock, T. L. Perry and E. B. Rucker, the pastor at that time. They assisted Rev. R. A. Clark, the District Superintendent of the Paris District, in the dedicatory services. Wesley Beard was the church school superintendent and Mrs. Beard was president of the Woman's Society of Christian Service. The stewards were: C. C. Hancock, W. B. Weatherspoon, R. L. Howell, B. C. Walker, Wesley Beard, S. J. Walker and his wife, Callie, led the young people eight years.

Rev. James O'Brien is the pastor, also serving the Bethlehem Methodist Church.

Farmers over the area got a lot of farm work done the past week. Some beans were planted, after good preparation of seed bed, and quite a number of acres of corn were planted. Those who grow tobacco are Dolphus Bowlin and Sam Mathis. The weed got transplanted to fields, Rubel Thomas has his tobacco set also. Seems as if the tobacco crop has been cut short.

COUSIN TUNY—

From this reception, we went to London's Guildhall as guests of Michael Butler and James Verner, American and British producer of "Hair". Among the special guests were Lyn Redgrave and the great English actress, Gladys Cooper. Saturday morning, business session noon luncheon . . . and an elaborate reception given by both houses of Parliament.

Then Sunday, a group of us boarded a plane for Dublin, Ireland . . . picked up a rented car and toured the country, staying at Ashford Castle, Dromoland Castle . . . enjoying the beautiful countryside. Included in the touring party were Martha Groom (Tennessee Farmers Coop); Olean Holloway (Buntin & Associates) and Lalah Gee (Nashville Gas Company). The time passed so quickly and before you could say "Queen Elizabeth" it was time to head for home. And in spite of all the beauty and being something like a storybook fairy tale, I'll still take Tennessee.

MRS. HILL—

church woman, this resolute individual who was the center of activity in her family, this winsome, yet wiry, little woman who influenced so many lives, I decided that I simply was not equal to the task of putting into words her truly inimitable character.

For the past several years Mrs. Hill had been confined to the home of her daughter Mrs. Mary Latta on Third Street. Her confinement did not mean that she shut out the world. Indeed, her world was perhaps more alive because she made it so.

She abhorred being, what might be termed, an invalid. Even until the last few days, she insisted on going to the dinner table on her own volition. And she did.

Just to recite such instances brings vividly to my mind an occasion last Fall when I took my grandson to see her. She was delighted that I would take time to bring the little fellow to see her, yet it was my way of observing that none of the fire for living had left her, although the energy for keeping it burning was dimming.

She loved her church far and beyond the call of duty. When disabled more than somewhat with a broken limb, and on crutches, it came time for the annual lecture series. She "commanded," and that's the only word to use, her daughter Grace to bring her to the News office to get the printing done, for it was a task she had assumed long ago, and she wasn't about to relinquish the duty and the happiness that went with doing it.

I admired her tremendously. I loved her as a dear friend and an individual whose strength of character gave me, and others, that sense of wanting to live as she had lived so that her world, and the people in it, knew that she had lived with distinction, and served her stewardship loyally here.

My friend Mrs. Hill died last Thursday morning at about 8:45 a. m.

Funeral services were held Saturday afternoon, May 30, in Hornbeak Funeral Home chapel, with Mrs. Will Amberg, Reader for the First Church of Christ Scientist, officiating. Burial was in Greenlea Cemetery.

Mrs. Hill, 89, the former Birdie Pierce, was the daughter of Dr. Herman Pierce and Mary Barham Pierce, pioneer citizens of Obion County. She attended Fairmont College at Washington, D. C., and Belmont College in Nashville, Tenn. She was the widow of Walter Hill, who preceded her in death 26 years ago.

Mrs. Hill was one of two women who ever served on the Fulton City Board of Education. She was a member of the Fulton Woman's Club and had held various positions in her church, the First Church of Christ Scientist.

Surviving are two daughters, Mrs. Mary Latta of Fulton and Mrs. Grace Beard of Martin; one son, Dick Hill of Melbourne, Australia, and six grandchildren, Mrs. Anne Peterson of Fulton; Susan, Ann and Rick Hill of Melbourne, Australia; Van and David Jennings of Pittsburg, Pa., and Kim and Pam Beard of Knoxville, Tenn.

Donnie McKnight of Hickman, right, had low score of 76 at Oak Hill Country Club in Clinton to win the "cheater's" trophy. More than 100 golfers were in the third Duffer's tournament. McKnight was the winner in the first tournament in 1968. Johnny Campbell of Fulton was runner-up with a 77. (Photo Courtesy Hickman County Gazette) hind our house in Highlands, we have one of the happiest mocking birds I have ever heard. He twitters, warbles, chirps and sings away, night after night, all night long, and if he were any louder, I'm sure he would wake the neighbors. In the quiet of the late night, and with the perfume of honeysuckle sweeping the yard, I find him a most restful contribution to the end of a hard day's work.

Send a letter to North Vietnam.

Right now hundreds of Americans are being held captive in North Vietnam.

A few prisoners have made it back. They talk about bamboo cages. Vicious beatings. Malnutrition. Humiliation.

But the North Vietnamese will tell us nothing. And it's this silence that makes our appeal more urgent.

For the families at home, there is no word on who's alive. Who's dead. Or even who's being held. There is nothing. Except the anguish of not knowing.

Maybe you can change this. By writing to the one man who can change it: The President of North Vietnam.

Ask him to release the names of prisoners, allow them to write to their families, and let the Red Cross inspect the prisons to insure proper medical treatment and living conditions.

Remind him that he is bound by the 1949 Geneva Convention which his country signed. And by the Istanbul resolution.

North Vietnamese leaders do care about American public opinion. And if they think they can gain something by bowing to it, they will.

But one letter won't do it. Or a thousand. Maybe it will take millions. So we've got to write now. All of us. And often.

Write a letter tonight. And send it to: Office of the President, Democratic Republic of Vietnam, Hanoi, North Vietnam.

It'll cost you a quarter. But it might save a life.

THE AMERICAN RED CROSS +

Maybe they'll open it.

Nashville Woman Announces For Governor Of Tennessee

She's Former Legislator, Educator

The race for the Democratic nomination for governor of Tennessee attracted another candidate today, Mary Anderson of Nashville, the first woman to seek the chief executive's desk since 1936.

Mrs. Anderson is a former member of the legislature and a former Nashville school supervisor. She made her announcement as a candidate in Nashville this morning before starting a statewide campaign trip to the Tri-Cities area, Chattanooga, Jackson and Memphis.

Mrs. Anderson announced several weeks ago she was considering the governor's race.

Her entry will make her the second woman in Tennessee history to seek the governorship since socialist Kate B. Stockton collected 3,786 votes in 1936. Mrs. Anderson will be the fifth person trying for the Democratic nomination this year.

John J. Hooker Jr., trying again for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination after his unsuccessful 1966 bid, told a McMinville audience Friday night that he is convinced that only calm constructive leadership can bring progress to Tennessee in the 1970s. Hooker said the talents and energies of youth need to be directed and if elected he intends to make a place for young people in his administration.

"The young people of the state constitute a tremendous asset which if not properly used could become a liability and even a destructive force."

Earlier Friday, Hooker had received the endorsement of Joe C. Carr, secretary of state for Tennessee for 22 years and treasurer of the Tennessee Democratic Party's executive committee.

A Jug of Wine and Thou, and how to serve it...

Many American wine enthusiasts are adopting the continental custom of pouring their table wine from a carafe, pitcher or other wine server which adds informal charm to the dinner table. This is particularly true of those who have discovered that bargains in California wines are often bottled in gallons or half gallons.

The oversize containers are large for table service, but they are convenient to hold several days supply of wine or ample wine for a modest party. A California Burgundy can accompany a pot roast one night and a spaghetti dinner later in the week.

The type of serving container most often used is a long-necked carafe holding about 28 ounces, enough for a dinner for four. It is easy to grasp and to pour from. A smaller version, holding half as much, is nice for a two-some. Individual carafes offer still another possibility. They hold up to eight ounces and are convenient for buffet or tray service. The nine-ounce all-purpose wine glass is a suitable serving companion for any of these.

Pictures and descriptions of various wine servers and glasses are available in a free brochure. For a copy, send a post card to WINE, P.O. Box 88, San Francisco, Calif. 94101.

Certified As Adult

10-Year-Old To Be Tried For Murder

CADIZ, Ky. — One of the youngest persons ever to be tried for a capital crime in Kentucky will be brought into Trigg Circuit Court in September.

Facing a charge of willful murder is 10-year-old Jimmy Shepherd, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Shepherd, Caledonia community, who will be tried as an adult on Sept. 17.

The youngster, along with his parents, appeared before Circuit Judge Stephen P. White today for arraignment and was released on his own recognizance.

The boy was certified as an adult by County Judge Zeller Cossey and the Trigg grand jury returned the indictment charging him with murder in its final report Tuesday.

The youth is accused of killing 12-year-old David Broadbent, who was found dead about a half-mile from his home in the Caledonia community on March 22. The slain boy was the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Broadbent.

The Broadbent boy was found

Mathis said at the inquest the Shepherd boy was at the site of the shooting with his mother and two other Shepherd children, ages 13 and 9. Mathis said the Broadbent youth apparently was in a tree when he was shot. The sheriff said he was told the shooting was accidental. Mathis said the mother and children apparently dragged the body of the youth about 800 yards and dumped it in the sinkhole. State Trooper Ronald Anderson said he tried to determine whether there had been any quarrel between the children, accidentally.

REPORTS FROM WASHINGTON

During the past sixteen months our national economy has been moving in strange directions. While inflation has continued to escalate, we have come into a period of what can technically be called a recession.

The first quarter of 1970 saw the sharpest drop in the Gross National Product since the last year of the Eisenhower administration. This was the second consecutive quarterly decline in the Gross National Product, which fits the generally accepted definition of recession.

During 1969 we saw the cost of living increase by more than 7.6 points -- the largest annual rise since 1951. The rate of inflation last year was above six per cent. In the previous eight years, the average inflationary rate was just over two per cent, with the worst single year (1968) at 4.6 per cent.

One week after the President took office last year, he announced publicly that his administration would not intervene in wage and price determination. Concentrated industries took this announcement as a go-ahead to raise their prices with the sky as the limit. As a result the prices of many of the basic industry products rose four times as rapidly last year as they had in the previous eight years. For example, steel mill products, which are used in any number of consumer items, increased their prices at a rate of 6.7 per cent last year. The combined increases of the previous eight years totalled only 7.1 per cent.

In addition to the increased cost of living and the ever-shrinking value of the dollar, we now have over a million more unemployed persons than we had sixteen months ago. The most recent unemployment figure is 4.8 per cent of our work force, as opposed to 3.3 per cent in January 1969. Besides the 3.8 millions persons who are now unemployed, there are other millions whose paychecks have been reduced by loss of overtime and shorter workweeks.

The stock market has also been on the decline, losing over $150 billion in one year. These losses are equivalent to the total annual expenditures of the Federal Government, excepting trust funds.

The executive branch of our government has many options at its disposal for affecting the state of our economy. The much discussed jawbone tactic has been used as an effective measure against unreasonable price increase in the past. The Federal Government's enormous leverage as the largest purchaser of goods and services can and should be used in the fight against inflation. The Federal Trade Commission and the Justice Department have powers which could be used in dealing with monopolies which operate against the interests of our economy.

So far, these options have not been exercised. Why they have not is beyond me. However, I still suspect that, since election time is drawing closer, changes will soon be made which will result in a healthier economy. For the average man, it will not be a moment too soon.

Most Americans do not object to tightening their belts and making sacrifices for the sake of our nation's economic well being. But when they see no sign that their sacrifices are helping the economy, they want changes in policy on the highest level.

Property In Most Counties Of State Assessed At 30 Pct.

NASHVILLE Property value while in Davidson and Hamilton counties the figure is 40 per cent.

"The increase has caused a great deal of confusion in many counties," said Randall Henderson, lawyer for the State Board of Equalization. "Property owners should be aware of procedures to follow if they feel the new level of assessment is unfair."

Appeals from the county boards may be carried to the state board until Aug. 1. If county courts retain the current tax rate, the higher assessment levels will mean an only 5 per cent of value.

Shelby and Bradley counties also increase in taxes. Courts set the ready assess at 50 per cent of new tax rate in July.

Vanderbilt Chancellor To Advise President

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Dr. Alexander Heard, the Vanderbilt University chancellor picked by President Nixon to advise him on student thinking, says he will serve as campus representative to the President, not the President's spokesman to the campus.

The President demonstrated to me his willingness to listen," Heard said, "I will do my best to help him hear."

Heard, 53, is a nattily dressed 5-foot-10 Georgia native who has seen considerable government service, including duty on the staff of the U.S. Embassy in Ecuador in 1941-43. He holds a doctorate from Columbia University, is a Democrat and the father of four children.

Since assuming his post as chancellor of Vanderbilt seven years ago, he has encouraged dissent, faced off disgruntled alumni over students' rights to hear such diverse speakers as Stokely Carmichael and George C. Wallace, and weathered one Nashville campus storm.

"The university's obligation is not to protect students from ideas but rather to expose them to ideas," he once said, "and to make them capable of handling and, hopefully, having ideas."

Heard faced a crowd of more than 2,000 of Vanderbilt's 7,000 students Friday soon after the President announced his two-month appointment and admitted a "feeling of grief" about the state of campus dissent.

"I feel there's a great gap between the nation's educators, the students and the government," he told the students. "I have felt it as our colleges and universities drifted farther and farther apart from the nation around them."

In an effort to bring students and the Vanderbilt trustees closer together, he fostered a plan approved two years ago by the trustees to elect each year a graduating senior to an eight-year term on the board. Similar plans have been adopted since by several other schools. This year's new Vanderbilt trustee is Walter R. Murray Jr., a Nashville Negro.

COMPANY OWNERS—Ed Griffin (right), a longtime employee of the Home Lumber Company, has purchased an interest in the firm and has been named president of the corporation. W.D. McNulty is secretary-treasurer. The two purchased the interest held by Robert McNulty.

Ed Griffin Buys Interest In UC Firm

Ed Griffin, who has worked as yard foreman at the Home Lumber Company in Union City for the past 15 years, has purchased an interest in the firm and is now president of the corporation.

For years the firm had been operated as a partnership by Robert McNulty and his brother, W.D. McNulty. Robert McNulty decided to retire from the business recently, following a heart attack, and Mr. Griffin and W.D. McNulty purchased his interest and formed a corporation.

Robert McNulty moved to Union City from Bolivar in 1922 and purchased the Union City Lumber Company from Tom Reynolds. At that time it was located across from Talley's Service Station on First Street where the old Kroger building is now. In partnership with Mr. McNulty was the late E.P. Futrell.

After the business burned in 1933, Mr. McNulty joined the New York Life Insurance Company but, in 1937, he and W.D. McNulty bought out the Home Builders Supply Company, located where Home Lumber Company is now.

Since that time and until Robert McNulty suffered an attack last October, the firm had been operated by the McNulty brothers.

W.D. McNulty now serves as secretary-treasurer.

Mr. Griffin was born in the Dixie community, son of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Griffin. He was graduated from Dixie High School in 1951 and worked in Michigan for a few months before going into the farming business with his father. He remained with his father until 1955 when he joined Home Lumber Company.

Mr. Griffin is married to the former Miss Glenda Lee Kindred of Fulton. They have two children, Tony 7 and Teresa 11. They are members of the Cumberland Presbyterian church where Mr. Griffin serves as the Sunday School superintendent. Mrs. Griffin works at the Union City Bakery.

The Griffins make their home on Sunswet Drive.

New Position For Harrison

Bill Harrison, who in the past 15 years has risen from clerk to manager of the Personal Loan Department and vice-president of the Old & Third National Bank, is stepping down from his position to become associated with the Fulton, Ky., Coca-Cola Bottling Company.

Mr. Harrison will assume his new position Monday.

The Fulton bottling firm was owned and operated for 50 years by Mr. Harrison's father-in-law, Pete Pitzer, who died last year.

Mr. Harrison, his wife and five children will continue to make their home on Cheatham Street in Union City.

James White, president of the Old & Third, said today: "Over the past several years Mr. Harrison has done a magnificent job for the bank in every way. We regret that he is leaving the bank but we wish him all the success in the world in his new venture."

Aside from his banking accomplishments, Mr. Harrison in the past has been most active in the Jaycees and, in 1959, won the Distinguished Service Award and boxing, in 1950.

Following his graduation he became a salesman with the old Lowiace-Farmer Wholesale Grocery firm of Union City. When this firm closed its Union City office in 1954 and moved all its facilities to Martin, Mr. Harrison went with the Joe Moore Fruit Company.

He remained there until he joined the bank in 1955.

Mr. Harrison is married to the former Miss Melba Pitzer. They have five children, Claudia 14, Carmen 12, Betsy 6, and twin boys, Bill and Pete, 2.

Writing Awards To Be Offered

Several competitive creative writing scholarship awards will be offered freshmen and junior transfers entering the University of Tennessee at Martin for the fall quarter 1970. Dr. Charles Mangum, chairman of the Department of English, has announced.

Awards are being offered in the fields of poetry, drama, and fiction. Dr. Mangum pointed out that manuscripts, with return envelopes, should be sent to him immediately.

A creative writing course for freshmen will be offered, along with upper division courses in the writing of poetry, playwriting, and fiction writing. William Snyder, well-known playwright, is in charge of drama and fiction. Stephen Mooney, post-in-residence at UTM and editor of Tennessee Poetry Journal, will be in charge of the introductory freshman course and the advanced poetry workshop.

The creative writing program at UTM is already well established. Student plays have had successful performances and works in poetry and fiction by UTM students have been published. Applicants from any part of America are eligible for the scholarships. Dr. Mangum said. The closing date for submission is July 1.

INSIDE-OUTSIDE SAVES THE RIGHT SIDE

Sorting colors and pre-treating badly soiled areas are probably second nature to you in laundering permanent press garments. Here's another pre-washing suggestion that can prolong the life of those garments. Simply turn clothing inside out before laundering to reduce wear along crease lines. Magic sizing, sprayed on as you do touch-up ironing, reduces wear and tear on you. Its special lubricant helps your iron glide over fabrics quickly and easily, and Magic sizing restores original body without adding scratchy stiffness.

Sheep Smugglers Risked Their Lives

MADRID—The Romans under Emperor Claudius brought sheep to Spain in the First Century A.D. Riches from wool helped finance the voyages of the conquistadors and even Columbus. Death awaited any shepherd caught smuggling merino sheep out of Spain, but some took the risk and gradually merino flocks began to develop elsewhere in Europe.

Purchase

150 Years

SESQUICENTENNIAL

MAY BE PURCHASED NOW AT THE OFFICE OF

The Fulton County News

UNBOUND COPIES... $1⁰⁰

We will mail anywhere in the U.S.
Add $1 extra per copy for postage and handling.

The Jackson Purchase Historical Society has gathered material for this Edition for many months. Many people throughout the area contributed material.
Time did not permit the use of some material which the Society hopes to use at a later date. This 124-page Edition is in newspaper form with advertising from area businesses. Several hundred pictures and several hundred thousand words are used in the edition to tell a portion of the history of this eight-county area.
Much of the material is new and the entire edition is the largest volume in one edition covering the Purchase ever compiled.

A part of the revenue from the sale of the Edition will be given to the Jackson Purchase Historical Society to assist them in their continuing their efforts to gather and preserve the history of the Jackson Purchase. This newspaper appreciates the tremendous work of the Historical Society in this unusual undertaking. Micro-film copies of this Edition as well as bound copies will be presented to area libraries for use in their counties by interested students and historians. The Society appreciates the public's contributions to the Edition and regrets that some of the material was too late to be incorporated in the history.
